Explanatory Notes:

Regarding numbers 2.4.1, 2.5 and 2.6

Marginal short-term employment according to section 8 SGB IV

1. Content of the act

According to section 8 SGB IV – as amended on 1 April 2003 – marginal short-term employment is defined as follows:

- 1) The remuneration does not regularly exceed EUR 400 per month since 1 April 2003 and EUR 450 per month since 1 January 2013 (marginal short-term employment),
- 2) the employment within the calendar year is limited to a maximum of three months or 70 working days due to its nature or prior contractual agreement, unless the employment is carried out as a profession and the remuneration exceeds the limit stated in number 1 above (short-term employment).

2. Scope

According to judgments by the Federal Social Court, an employment is carried out as a profession if it is the employee's main source of income or to such extent that his or her financial position depends to a large extent on the employment carried out. Therefore, the employment must make up a significant part of the relevant person's financial position, taking into account his or her entire income and assets.

According to judgments by the Federal Social Court, an employment is not considered short-term if the number of work-days exceeds 70 days within one calendar year of permanent employment or an employment relationship that is recurring regularly.

If a person has several marginal short-term employments according to section 1 number 1 or section 1 number 2, these must be added up. If, in addition to non-marginal short-term employment subject to statutory insurance (main employment), only one marginal short-term employment is carried out, these are not added together.

If, however, several marginal short-term employments are carried out in addition to non-marginal main employment subject to statutory insurance, the marginal short-term employment that was taken up first remains free of statutory insurance. The remaining marginal short-term employments must be added to the non-marginal employment, provided the latter is subject to statutory insurance.

The abovementioned provisions apply accordingly if the employment is carried out as self-employment. This does not apply to unemployment insurance.

3. Exemption from statutory pension insurance

Since 1 January 2013, employees in marginal short-term employment (EUR 450 mini-job) are generally subject to statutory insurance and full payment of statutory pension insurance. The pension insurance share to be paid by the employee amounts to 3.6 percent of the remuneration (or 13.6 percent for employees in marginal short-term employment in private households). This amount is the difference between the employer's flat-rate share (15 percent for marginal short-term employment for commercial employers / 5 percent for employment in private households) and the full pension insurance contribution of 18.6 percent. Full pension insurance contributions have to be paid starting at a minimum remuneration of EUR 175.

Advantages of the full payment of pension insurance

Through payment of statutory insurance shares employees acquire contribution periods in the statutory pension insurance. This means that the period of employment will count fully towards the fulfillment of the different qualifying periods (minimum period of insurance). Compulsory contribution periods are for example preconditions for

- early retirement,
- entitlements to rehabilitation benefits (concerning medical care and your work life),
- the entitlement to transitional allowance in case of rehabilitation measures of the statutory pension insurance,
- the entitlement to a pension in case of reduced earning capacity,
- the entitlement to have part of the remuneration paid into a company pension plan and
- the fulfillment of the conditions for a private pension plan with state incentives (for example Riester pension plan) for the employee and, if applicable, also for the spouse.

Additionally, the remuneration will fully count towards a future pension.

Application for exemption from the obligation to pay statutory pension insurance shares

If an employee does not want to pay his or her statutory insurance share, he or she can be exempted by the employer. In order to do so, the employee has to fill out form 45201 for the LBV, which states that he or she wants to be exempted from paying statutory pension insurance. If the employee has several marginal short-term employments, the application for exemption can only be made for all marginal short-term employments simultaneously. The employee has to inform all other and future employers who engage him or her in marginal short-term employment about the application for exemption. The exemption from statutory insurance is effective for the entire term of the marginal short-term employment and cannot be revoked.

The exemption is generally effective from the beginning of the calendar month in which it was received by the employer, at the earliest from the beginning of the employment. For the exemption to become effective the employer has to give note of the exemption request to the mini-job center (Minijob-Zentrale) before the next remuneration payment, at the latest within 6 weeks after the receipt of the exemption request. Otherwise, the exemption will become effective one month later.

Consequences of the exemption from the obligation to pay pension insurance shares

Marginal short-term employees who request the exemption from statutory pension insurance voluntarily waive the above-mentioned advantages. Through the exemption, only the employer has to pay the fixed payment of 15 percent (or 5 percent in case of employment in a private household) of the remuneration. The payment of the employee's share is canceled. As a consequence, the employee only acquires partial months for the fulfillment of the different qualification periods and the remuneration will only count partially in the pension calculation.

Please note:

Before the employee decides to be exempted from the statutory pension insurance scheme, it is advised to consult the Deutsche Rentenversicherung Advice Centre (Beratungsstelle): +49 (0) 800 10004800 (free of charge). Please have your pension insurance number at hand.

4. Waiving the right to be exempt from pension insurance

Employees with marginal short-term employment lasting beyond 31 December 2012 are exempt from statutory pension insurance if their remuneration does not exceed EUR 400 per month. However, both they and employees engaged in marginal short-term employment since 1 January 2013 can become obliged to make statutory pension insurance payments if they waive their right to be exempt from it. In this case, the pension insurance share to be paid by the employee amounts to 3.6 percent (or 13.6 percent for employees in marginal short-term employment in private households) of the remuneration. This amount is the difference between the employer's flat-rate share (15 percent for marginal short-term employment for commercial employers / 5 percent for employment in private households) and the full pension insurance contribution of 18.6 percent. Full pension insurance contributions have to be paid starting at a minimum remuneration of EUR 175.

Advantages of the full payment of pension insurance

The advantages of the full payment of pension insurance are laid out in number 3.

Waiving the right to be exempt from pension insurance

If an employee with marginal short-term employment wants to acquire the same entitlements as employees subject to statutory pension insurance, he or she has to fill in form LBV 45202 for the LBV, which states that he or she wants to waive the right to be exempt from paying statutory pension insurance. If the employee has several marginal short-term employments, the declaration can only be made for all marginal short-term employments simultaneously. The employee has to inform all other and future employers who engage him or her in marginal short-term employment about the declaration. The declaration is effective for the entire duration of the marginal short-term employment and cannot be revoked.

Unless the employee wants to set a later date, the declaration is effective one day after it was received by the employer.

Individual advice from Deutsche Rentenversicherung

Before an employee decides to waive the right to be exempt from pension insurance, they can seek advice on the consequences of this for their individual situation from the Deutsche Rentenversicherung Advice Centre (Beratungsstelle): +49 (0) 800 10004800 (free of charge).

Regarding number 2.8

As of 1 January 2005, the contributions to the statutory long-term insurance for childless members born after 31 December 1939 who are at least 23 years old are raised by 0.25 contribution points (according to the Kinder-Berücksichtigungsgesetz (KiBG), raising children is taken into account for the calculation of statutory long-term care insurance contributions, i. e. surcharge for childless persons).

The surcharge does not have to be paid if the fact that the member is a parent is proven to the employer by, for example, copies of a birth certificate, adoption certificate, or if the relevant entity knows from other sources that the person is a parent.

In addition to biological or adoptive parents, step parents and foster parents may also be considered parents.

If proof is provided within three months of the beginning of the employment or after the birth of the child, the proof is deemed provided as of the beginning of the employment or as of the birth of the child. Otherwise, the proof is only deemed effective from the month following the month in which the proof was provided.

Regarding number 2.10

According to regulations and principles governing the civil service, pension benefits are, for example, retirement pensions or similar payments from the Bund, a Land, a local council or an association of local councils or any other body, foundation or institution under public law.

Regarding number 2.13

Persons, who, due to a statutory obligation, are members of an insurance institution under public law set up specifically for a certain professional group, may be exempted from statutory pension insurance upon application.

According to the decision of the Federal Social Court from 31 October 2012, a new exemption request has to be submitted to the Deutsche Rentenversicherung Bund with every change of employment.

According to section 6 subsection 4 SGB IV, the request has to be submitted within a period of three months. Otherwise, the exemption can only become effective on the date of the request, regardless whether the material conditions for the exemption were effective beforehand.
